LOYOLA COLLEGE OF EDUCATION RESEARCH FORUM (LCERF)

RESEARCH INITIATIVES

- To oversee and codify the research efforts, Loyola College of Education established the Loyola College of Education Research Forum (LCERF).
- The institution strongly expects research with high standards and without literary theft.
- The institution encourages its faculty members to write research papers and journals and to publish in UGC care journals.
- The goal of the institution is to create a society that is full of creative ideas and innovative thinking.
- LCERF promotes action research by organising orientation, workshops, and seminars for student teachers. This gave all aspiring teachers a comprehensive perspective on the possibility of engaging in action research during their internship. Teacher Educators guide them appropriately during the research process.
- Loyola College of Education collaborates with other educational institutions to expand research possibilities and experiences, which further enriches the research.
- Working with other educational organisations, inform the faculty and prospective teachers about the difficulties in society will face in the future.
- Research and collaboration with other educational institutions will foster creative thinking.
- Depending on the needs, cooperation is encouraged through a Memorandum of Understanding with the relevant institute.
- The actions are recorded in reports that are methodically written.
- Loyola College of Education encourages faculty members to engage in research by offering incentives and On Duty for attending two seminars or conferences during the academic year.
